One World School Core Values	Agree (Yes or No)	Questions or Comments
Guiding Principles for Learning
All children have the capacity to achieve success and their potential, given optimum learning environments and effective methods of instruction.
Children of all abilities can learn together and from one another in one school.
A strength-based approach to learning values children's capacity to contribute meaningfully to family and their communities.
The school community is responsible for providing equitable access to learning and opportunities for participation for children of all abilities.
Barriers to learning must be identified and removed through changes in learning conditions and instructional methods.
Student ownership of and engagement in learning is optimized through inquiry-based education.
One World School community members reflect upon their social responsibility and act to make changes to improve the lives of others in their communities.
Teachers, parents, and students have shared responsibility and accountability for learning.
